Homemade recipe for mange.

4 cups of water with 3 tbsp of borax - DO NOT USE BORIC ACID (warm water stir until borax is dissolved)

2 cups of hydrogen peroxide 3% (you can half this recipe for a small dog)

Used it on the dog every 2 days during the first week,

Then use it every 3 days the second week,

Then use it twice a week for a few weeks more.

Your dog should well bathed before applying it.

First gently brush the dog on the affected areas to remove the itchy gunk.

Towel dry the dog and while still humid, apply the mixture to the dog in a tub or a bathing tin so whatever runs off you can scoop up and continue applying.

Don't towel dry your dog once you're done.

Let the dog naturally dry its hair out.

Don't let the dog rub himself on a mat or towel as this will remove the residue mixture.

Make sure however that the dog won't lick themselves so if need be, put a dog cone on the dog.

It will take +- a month and a half but it will be worth it.

Dogs with long hair first have to have a haircut before the treatment that will help in the process.

Occasionally the dog might again get a flare up but you don't have to go through the whole thing as described above because as soon as you see the dog start itching, you can nip it in the bud.

Usually found that with just 2 baths in one week the dog will be good.

The dog hair and skin becomes very soft after you do this.

Hope this helps - the peroxide is only the transmission agent, the borax is what kills the eggs and mites.

In-between baths use Coconut oil and the yellow Sulfodene and mixed them together half and half and rubbed the all over the body including the paws - and in the ears with a q-tip - everyday twice a day and the dog will be healed.

Make sure you do not rinse the dog at all let the dog dry in a kennel or a room you allow it in – you can put a cone on the dog till the dog is completely dry.

The dog should look great in comparison with the first week before treatment.

You will see progress after starting using the coconut and Sulfodene mixture ointment.

Your dog will be happy dog once again.

Again please note! - NOT USE BORIC ACID!!!! You would likely kill your dog in a painful way.
