Human supplements for dogs.

Some human supplements are fine to give to dogs as long as you adjust the dosage for their size – ask your vet.

Give no more than half the human dosage to a 30 kg dog, and one-quarter the human dosage to a 15kg dog if you feed a commercial diet. Very small dogs need products made for them to get the dosage right.

For dogs fed a homemade diet, you can give half a human supplement dosage once a day - a-day type of multivitamin supplement to dogs weighing up to 30 kg, to help make up for what might be missing in the diet.

Note! Don't use children's products that contain xylitol, which can be very toxic to dogs!
