The principle of understanding & disagreeing or disagreeing because you do not understand.

There is a vast difference between those who "understand" and disagree, and between those who disagree because they did not "understand."

No place here to stone or insult the messenger >>>> agree to disagree peacefully.

More crudely put – if the heat in the kitchen becomes unbearable – leave.

On www.pitbullsa.co.za and on this page you might find contradicting views on certain subjects relating to the APBT Bulldog – Information thus shared was taken from various personal understandings, might stimulate your thoughts on the truth you believe in.

Trend taken from SCHOOLBOY LIVES II – and added to >>>> Анатолий Ко – Author.

Come on! >>> There is a difference between those who "understand and disagree, and between those who disagree because they did not "understand."

John Wayne (1907-1979) >>> "I can explain it to you, but I can't understand it for you..."

Michael Scott >>> "A man who won't stand for what he believes isn't a man! All men must stand by their belief even if it is not accepted by others."

Add – Gawie Manjaro >>> Not be blown of your feet or baffle your understanding with every fart or wind that blows.

Also a fact >>> Анатолий Ко >>> "It's a strange fact, but a person who doesn't understand what you're talking about considers you "stupid", not himself."

Amanda Clanin

Most dog owners, and especially APBT Bull-doggers, have comprehensive knowledge about “most” aspects of managing APBT Bulldogs >>> this said >>>> that does not make them teachers. Teaching or sharing information is a whole different skill – in the Bible it relates to a gift ministry >>> Eph 4.11.

As a completely unrelated example >>> many physicists did not consider “Steven Hawking” particularly brilliant.

<https://www.quora.com/What-do-physicists-think-of-Stephen-Hawking>

However, no one can deny his absolute genius of being able to impart theoretical physics in such a way as to make it somewhat understandable and enjoyable to the layman.

Imparting knowledge in the written word of audibly can definitely be considered an art or a gift.

Peter Edwards.

If communication of knowledge is the goal, then making the knowledge as comprehensible as possible should be of utmost importance to the “sharer” of knowledge, in order to avoid a situation where those disagreeing are doing so because of a misunderstanding. In other words, do your due diligence in making communication a mutual and possibly enjoyable experience.

As example >>> as above >>>> using “fart” in conjunction with wind that blows – ha ha – Gawie MK.

Scott Fluper.

Similarly - as was said >>>> "You can't know what to look for if you don't know what you are looking at" and then flip it as "you can't know what you are looking at if you don't what to look for".

Анатолий Ко.

The knowledge recorded in books (the written word) is a consolidated positive and negative experience of many people and many generations.

The knowledge recorded in BOOKS is a THEORY.

The rest depends on the reader.

There are the same textbooks and the same teachers at schools, college, and institute.

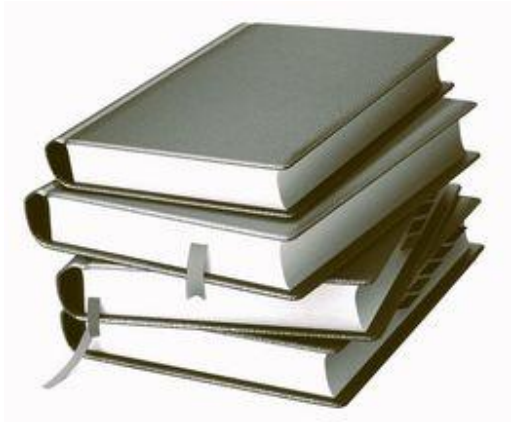

Add in >>> Gawie MK.

Fact >>> but the students or audience differ: some grasp immediately – other need more detail simplistic explanation on a specific subject.

Moreso – understanding also depends on previous experience and knowledge >>> and more so on the passion and a definite interest on the subject >>>> the yearning to know more.

Also to consider >>> the language and more so the “accent” of addressing a subject plays a big role for the recipient.

Realizing our South African English accent differ a great deal from Australian, Irish, Swedish and some American and African English dialects – hard on the ear.

Intuition already "knows" what it is looking for, even when consciousness has not yet formulated this goal.
There is one red flag >>> intuition should not be confused with extrapolation – relating to more factual information based on existing inadequate knowledge.

Tail end example >>>> regarding the "GAME TEST",
Pat Patrick said it well: "You can see a lot if you know what to look at."

That's it Gawie Manjaro – MK.
